CRAWFORD BEATEN

FRED PERRY TRIUMPHS IN FIVE SETS

Britain's First Success
Since 1903.

AUSTRALIAN ECLIPSED IN LAST TWO SETS

New York, To-day.

Jack Crawford has failed in his attempt to secure the world's four major tennis titles. At Forest Hills yesterday he was surprisingly beaten by Fred Perry, the British ace, by 6-3, 11-13, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1 in the Final Round of the American National Championship.

Perry's triumph was Britain's first success in this tournament since H. L. Doherty's win the 1903, and for the first time in the history of the tournament it was an all-Emire Final.

Perry's triumph was most unexpected, but fully deserved. He won the first set by hard driving to the corners and following up with kills at the net after an early lead of 3-1.

Crawford rallied in the second set to win after a tense struggle which went to 24 games and by bruiny tennis took a set lead when he went out 6-4 in the third. He displayed magnificent backhand shots which time and again caught Perry on the wrong foot on his advance to the net.

In the fourth and fifth sets, however, Perry could do nothing wrong and Crawford nothing right.

Perry sent over terrific services in these last two sets and Crawford, who seemed listless, was only able to secure one game. A strong wind bothered both players, causing many double faults.

It must be said that Crawford hurt his knee when he fell during his semi-final match against Shields, but how much, if any, this influenced the result is difficult to say.—Reuter.

Yesterday's encounter was the first between these players this year, as Perry was forced to stand down in the last singles game in the Davis Cup match against Australia, owing to a strained back. Harold Lee substituting against Crawford.

In the French Championships Perry was beaten by Satoh in the quarter finals, only to see his conqueror overwhelmed by Crawford in the next round. At Wimbledon Perry was the first seeded player to be eliminated, Norman Panhard, son beating him in the Second Round.

Perry's success follows his triumph over Ellsworth Vines in the Inter-Zone Final of the Davis Cup when the American fainted after Perry had held match point, and his invaluable wins over Cochet and Merlin in the Challenge Round against France.

Now that the American Championships are over the British and Australian teams will take part in the Pacific Coast tournaments before leaving for Australia where the British team are making an official tour. Perry, Harold Lee, Pat Hughes, E. R. Avey and J. Wild are members of the British team, while the Australian quartet is comprised of Jack Crawford, Adrian Quist, Vivian McGrath, and Don Turnbull.

AVOIDING NAVAL RACE

Japan And America
Seek Truce.

ASK BRITAIN TO ASSIST
TREATY REVISION

London, To-day.

The "Daily Express" reports that Japan and the United States have decided to ask Britain to participate in a new Three-Power Conference to revise the Washington and London Naval Treaties.

The newspaper states that the decision to form a new treaty is a sequel to the recent exchange of notes between the United States and Japan following the Japanese protest against President Roosevelt's decision to inaugurate a $47,000,000 warship building programme.—Reuter.

CURRENCY INFLATION IN AMERICA

Probable Within Three Months.

DISPARITY BETWEEN INCOMES
AND PRICES

New York, To-day.

The possibility of currency inflation in the United States, within three months, through a reduction in the gold content of the dollar, is hinted by Mr. Henry C. Wallace, United States Secretary of Agriculture.

The "New York Times" quotes Mr. Wallace as saying that the people are likely to grow impatient in the next three months, and demand a strong dose of inflation unless the disparity between the farmer's income and the price he pays for his purchases can be overcome by an increase in costs.

Under the National Recovery Administration, America was going into increased purchasing power through pay-rolls and not into increased profits.—Reuter.

SWISS FRONTIER GUARDS.

Armed Reinforcement on German Border.

Geneva.

As a result of the series of deplorable incidents which have occurred on the frontier between Switzerland and Germany, the Swiss customs authorities at Basel have decided to reinforce the frontier guards. Customs patrols in future will consist of at least two men armed with carbines and if this does not prove sufficient the strength of the patrols may be still further increased.—Reuter.

U.S. NAVAL ARRAY NEAR CUBA

NEW REGIME MAY NOT BE RECOGNISED

ARGENTINE HINT FOR "HANDS OFF" POLICY BY AMERICA

WASHINGTON, TO-DAY.

UNITED STATES RECOGNITION OF THE NEW CUBAN REGIME WILL DEPEND ON ITS ABILITY TO MAINTAIN ORDER AND PROTECT LIFE AND PROPERTY, ACCORDING TO UNOFFICIAL STATEMENTS MADE HERE, YESTERDAY. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS DETERMINED TO INSIST ON COMPLETE PROOF OF THIS ABILITY BEFORE RECOGNITION IS GRANTED.

Meanwhile, the United States Administration is not relaxing precautions, and has ordered a re-shuffling of the ships in Cuban waters. The cruiser, "Bainbridge," has been ordered to Puerto Padre, while five out of the nine destroyers en route to Cuba have been ordered to Guantanamo. The remainder will await orders at Key West, Florida.—Reuter.

Havana, To-day.

"I shall honour all Government obligations, including public debts, to the last penny," declared the new President of Cuba Prof. Grau San Martin, in a speech at the Palace yesterday. He swore to fulfil the revolutionary programme "with the maximum respect for all interests established here."

He stressed his desire for American friendship.—Reuter.

ORDER REIGNS IN CUBA.

Roosevelt Watches
Situation.

Norfolk, Virginia, to-day. President Roosevelt is not relaxing his watch on the Cuban situation. Yesterday he conferred with General Leo, Commander of the Marine post at Quantico, Virginia, and Commander Williams, Commander of the Marine regiment mobilised there for possible duty in Cuba.

The President afterwards resumed his yacht cruise which he cancelled on Saturday.

Meanwhile nine more United States destroyers, have been ordered to Cuba, and it is understood that the United States may not accept Professor Grau San Martin as President, and instead, may regard him as a product of the Revolution.

A message from Havana states that perfect order reigns in Cuba, but that a paradoxical situation exists in the Army in which the new Government proposes the highest rank to be that of Colonel, and that the Sergeants shall choose the officers.

Those chosen, however, refuse to serve and state that they will stand by ex-President Carlos Cespedes y Ortiz, who was deposed on September 5.—Reuter.

DRASTIC COTTON REDUCTION

U.S. Acreage Cut By 37 1/2 Per Cent.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Washington, To-day.

A drastic reduction in cotton acreage for 1934 was announced yesterday by Mr. Henry C. Wallace, United States Secretary for Agriculture.

The Government have decided to cut the acreage to 25,000,000 from the normal 40,000,000, thus making the crop slightly above the domestic consumption for the 1922-1932 period. As the average consumption for this period was about 25,000,000 bales, it is understood that the Government intend to guarantee the United States cotton crop at a price of 15 cents per bale.—Reuter.

NAZI AIMS OUTLINED

WISH TO UNITE AUSTRIA WITH GERMANY

Terms For "Peaceful Settlement."

NAZIS WANT REPRESENTATION IN CABINET

Munich, To-day.

The Nazi terms for a "peaceful settlement" with the Austrian Government were outlined by Herr Habicht, the famous "Inspector for Austria," in a broadcast talk from Munich, last night. Herr Habicht declared that the conditions were:

Firstly, the re-establishment of the Nazis' rights and liberties as a political party in Austria.

Secondly, the abolition of legal measures against Nazi Party members.

Thirdly, a Nazi representation in a temporary Cabinet constituted in accordance with the strength of the Nazi Party.

Fourthly, that general elections be held as soon as possible.

Fifthly, the formation of a Government in accordance with election results. Herr Habicht stressed that the Nazis aim was to unite Austria with Germany, but that they wished to accomplish this by arrangement with the Powers concerned and not by force.—Reuter.

IRAQ CABINET RE-APPOINTED

Week's Mourning For King Feisal.

SMALL ANTI-BRITISH DEMONSTRATION

Baghdad, To-day.

King Ghazi, the new ruler of Iraq, has already assumed his responsibilities. He has re-appointed the Premier and all Cabinet Ministers to the posts they held under King Feisal.

Meanwhile, a week's mourning for King Feisal will be observed in every town and village throughout the country, as well as in Trans-Jordan and Syria, where King Feisal's death (he was once King of Syria) was the excuse for a small anti-British demonstration in a mosque at Aleppo. However, acting with promptitude, the French authorities there are taking steps to prevent any further trouble.

King Feisal's body is now at Brindisi, awaiting the arrival of the British cruiser Despatch, which will convey the remains to Haifa.—Reuter.

BANDITS DERAIL TRAIN.

Manchukuo Guard
Captured.

PASSENGERS TAKEN PRISONERS

Harbin, To-day.

Bandits yesterday morning derailed the rail and derailed a passenger train, according to a report from the Manchukuo Government. The train was carrying passengers and goods. The bandits captured the train and took the passengers and goods to a nearby village. The Manchukuo Government is now searching for the bandits.—Reuter.

NAVAL OFFICERS' TRIAL IN TOKYO

Three Death Sentences
Sought

Tokyo, To-day.

The Prosecutors have demanded death sentences for the three Naval subalterns, Koga, Kato, and Kawase, who were involved in the sinking of the British cruiser Despatch. The three officers were captured by the Japanese Navy in May 1932. The Prosecutors are now seeking the death penalty for the three officers.—Reuter.

TYPHOON UNLIKELY TO HIT COLONY

Will Probably Pass
South.

LONG DROUGHT BROKEN

Hong Kong awoke this morning to grey skies and drizzle, and the sight of the typhoon signals flying, giving rise to hopes that the long drought, which, with the exception of the fall of an insignificant shower on the second day of this month, has lasted for 25 days, had broken at last.

Unless the typhoon recedes from its present track, there is little danger of the Colony experiencing a serious blow. Latest reports indicate that the storm will pass to the south of Hong Kong, and probably enter the coast.

The first typhoon of the year to form in the vicinity of the Colony, is expected that Hong Kong would experience the gale some time to-day, owing to its close proximity. The storm formed about 60 miles to the west of the Pratas Shoal, about 100 miles south-east of Hong Kong, and was expected to move west-north-west.

The first warning was hoisted at 7.10 a.m. to-day, when No. 7 signal indicated that a gale was expected from the north-east, but by noon it was evident that the typhoon was not on a direct track for the Colony.

North-east winds, moderate, freshening considerably, probably to a gale, with squalls and rain, was forecast by the Royal Observatory in the weather report issued at 10.12 a.m.

A later report on the progress of the typhoon, timed 11 a.m. at the Royal Observatory, states that the typhoon at that time was situated about 90 miles S.S.E. of Hong Kong, and moving W.N.W. Indications then were that it would pass 50 miles south of Gap Rock, and enter the coast to the west of Macao.

The rainfall for the 24 hours ending 10 a.m. to-day was 0.25 inch, bringing the total since January 1 to 41.10 inches, against an average of 69.55 inches.

A telegram received by the American Consulate-General at 8.40 this morning from the Manila reports a typhoon situated at 8.40 a.m. in about 115 degrees East Longitude and 21 degrees North Latitude, direction unknown.

THREE KILLED IN DARING U.S. PRISON BREAK

13 Convicts Escape Locks
Screen Of Reverser Fails

New Orleans, To-day. Three men were killed in a daring prison break at the Louisiana State Penitentiary yesterday when 13 long-term prisoners escaped with a full complement of arms, including a machine gun, and a large sum of money. The escape was the result of a failure of the prison's security system.—Reuter.

EUROPEAN FLOGGED

RESIDENTS AND NATIVES IN DISPUTE

Admiral Evans To Investigate.

BRITISH WARSHIP SENT TO SIMONSTOWN

Capetown, To-day.

Vice-Admiral E. R. G. R. Evans, popularly known as "Evans of the Broke" Commander-in-Chief of the Africa Station, who is acting as High Commissioner, is making a trip to Bechuanaland from Simonstown, escorted by 200 marines with three howitzers, to investigate a report from the Magistrate at Serowe, that a European resident was flogged by sentence of the Kgotla native court, and to arbitrate in the dispute between the natives and the Europeans.

The Bechuanaland natives are peacefully disposed, and it is therefore presumed that the despatch of marines is a precautionary measure.

It is, however, significant that the Flagship, H.M.S. Carlisle, has hastened from Durban to Simonstown early yesterday, thus enabling Vice-Admiral Evans and his escort to leave with minimum delay.

The task will be a novel experience for Vice-Admiral Evans.—Reuter.

The Bechuanaland Protectorate is a central area of South Africa, inaccessible by railway, though lines run to the edge of the Protectorate. A large portion of the south and east of the Protectorate is covered by the Kalahari Desert.

The task will be a novel experience for Vice-Admiral Evans.—Reuter.

DECORATION OF FLOORS

Treatment Of Woodwork.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR CARPETS

The question of floors is a very important item in making a room look "just right," and one that is frequently overlooked.

For the modern house avoid patterned carpets—unless you are lucky enough to acquire an Aubusson or an early English weave.

Modernistic Effects

Some of the so-called modernistic carpets are all right, blending as they do shades of the same colour in faint rings, lines, or triangles, but they need great care in their selection, and anyone who is at all uncertain of his or her powers of decorative visualisation would be well advised to keep away from them and stick to the plain pile.

In deciding the tone of your carpet, remember that all floor coverings must be deeper shade of the other colourings in your room, not a great deal deeper, but about two tones.

If a fitted carpet is not possible, then have a good-sized square; but the edges of the floor left exposed must be considered. So many people think these must be parquet, but in many rooms the introduction of this golden-brown surround entirely ruins what would otherwise be an artistic triumph.

A Difficult Shade

Brown is a difficult colour, and one of the worst for decorating purposes.

An all-brown room, can look most attractive, but it has a sadly depressing effect on most minds, and for that reason, and that reason alone, is not recommended. A certain amount of brown can be used in a scheme, but it wants careful handling.

Beige, coffee, sand, and putty-colour can be used without any depressing results, but brown, red-brown, and chocolate are very harmful, though frequently used because of the erroneous dirt question. To return to the surround of the square carpet: don't stretch your purse to lay down parquet, but colour the existing boards to work in with your scheme of decoration. There are some wonderful colour wood stains to be had these days, which look lovely with or without polish, through which you can see the grain or "flower" in the wood.

Paint For Old Wood

If, however, the floors are old and on the rough side, paint is better; a hard, quick-drying cellulose is very durable, especially if you allow it extra time to really harden, and then polish with a good linoleum glaze; there are several to be had. Be sure to get a hard-drying glaze, and not ordinary floor polish, as these form a much better surface and prevent the paint from getting worn; polish regularly once a fortnight, especially where the floor gets the most traffic.

For halls and passages squares painted or stained in contrasting colours look most effective; these squares must be bold and large, 3in. to 4in. squares being best. Start marking out your squares from the centre of the passage or hall, as there is seldom space for equal numbers, and in this way the 1/2-squares work out at the sides.

Colours For Halls

Green and white, red and white

The Bathroom Beautiful

Sunshine Windows For Dark Rooms.

NEW DECORATIVE SCHEMES

It often happens that bathrooms in large blocks of flats are so placed as to be deprived of sunshine. Modern invention, however, has come to the rescue, and every bathroom, no matter which way it faces, or what its faces can possess a "sunshine" window.

This is gained by the simple use of tubular electric lighting placed behind gold-toned curtains of oil silk fabric. Thus a realistically sunny effect is obtained, which considerably adds to the cheerfulness of the room.

The Question of Curtains

Bathroom curtains are somewhat of a problem on account of the heat and steam to which they are subjected.

There is now on the market a reversible waterproof fabric which does not have to be taken down to be cleaned, but can be sponged or washed over with a damp cloth.

It is durable, yet has the appearance, when hung, of an ordinary woven material with a satiny finish, and can be gathered, pleated and stitched.

It can also be used for the surround of the shower-bath, or as a protection against splashing. Made in a variety of colours, it will tone in with any scheme of decoration.

Window Decoration

Frosted glass windows for the bathroom are becoming increasingly attractive, one appropriate design comprising fascinating fish diving in a whirl of air bubbles against a background of decorative shells.

Menu Suggestions For To-morrow

(Serving Three)

The Menu

Pineapple Mint Cup
Tuna Salad Shoe String Potatoes
Buttered Beets
Bread Butter
Butterscotch Cookies
Coffee

Pineapple Mint Cup

2 cups fresh or canned pineapple
2 tablespoons chopped fresh mint
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup sugar

Boll mint, sugar and water 2 minutes. Cool. Add pineapple and chill.

The mixture can be coloured a light green, which will lend a "cooling appearance."

Tuna Salad

(Other fish can be used)

1 cup tuna
2 hard cooked eggs, diced

or black, two shades of blue, cream and beige, almost any two good colours, in fact, will make a lovely floor.

If you can afford it, a marbling finish gives the effect of a real marble floor, but this is naturally more expensive and better for big houses.

For bathroom and lavatory floors, rubber is far the best, with a gay washable rug or two. The homemade wool rugs come in splendidly for this purpose; they are very easy to make, and you can work in the colours you want for your scheme, which are sometimes difficult to match up in rugs.

Other glass windows are colored to match the decorations, a lovely effect being produced by a conventional design in gold and dull, parchment-like green.

Tiles for the bathroom wall have, in some instances, been superseded by a lining of glass, the tiles being used only for the dado. A scheme of green and black is most effective in conjunction with the glass.

Many new ideas are being put forward for the bathroom floor, but nothing, perhaps, is as comfortable as rubber, which is silent to the step, hygienic, easily cleaned, and can be had plain or in various colours and designs, representing marble.

Mirrors

Illuminated mirrors are coming to be more often seen, the light being projected through the translucent glass margin surrounding the mirror, illuminating the person in front evenly, and without glare or shadow.

One entirely new design in mirror cabinets is fitted with a simple device which enables the mirror door to be adjusted in such a way that the right light can be obtained no matter in what position the cabinet is fixed.

Some Hints On Hair Beauty

Permanent Waves And Sea-Waves.

SIMPLE SHAMPOO RECIPE

UNLESS you are fortunate enough to have naturally wavy hair, the best method of keeping your locks neat and attractive during the hot weather is to have them permanently waved.

To counteract the drying effect of this process the drying give special attention to the hair beforehand.

Give your head an olive-oil bath, massaging the oil well into the scalp with the tips of the fingers.

Then shampoo thoroughly. The best shampoo to use for the purpose—unless you want to use camomile, tar or henna—is ordinary green soft soap, which can be obtained from any chemist for a few pence.

A Simple Shampoo

To prepare the shampoo dissolve a tablespoonful of the soap in a halfpint of hot water, adding, if you wish, a few drops of lavender water or oil of verbenia.

Wet the hair and pour on half of the shampoo, rubbing well into the scalp until a good lather results.

Rinse and repeat the process with the rest of the shampoo.

When you have got rid of all the soap, rub the yolk of an egg into the scalp, massaging with a rotary movement, which loosens the scalp and stimulates the glands. To your final rinsing water, add the juice of a lemon.

Your hair will now be beautifully soft and in excellent condition to undergo the permanent wave.

Beware Sea Water!

The care of your waves and curls after the hair has been permanently waved and set by the hairdresser is all-important, if you want to keep it looking its best.

Never go swimming without a bathing cap; sea water is excellent for the body, but simply ruinous to the hair.

Each morning spray a little setting lotion on the head, comb the hair backwards, then push slightly forward and press the waves into position with the fingers while the hair is still damp.

When dry a little brillianiline sprinkled into the palms of the hands and applied to the surface of the hair will remove any stiff appearance, soften the waves, and impart a beautiful gloss and sheen to the coiffure.

AVOIDING THE FINESSE

The course adopted by some Contract players of refusing to disturb the Opening bid, which has not been raised by the partner of the Opening bidder, is a losing course if the hand contains sufficient strength to justify an attempt to take the contract away from him and play it on the attack.

Partial scores are valuable, and even a game can sometimes be found hidden in the unrevealed honour strength and distribution of the partner. This is clearly shown in the hand discussed to-day.

1—South's hand certainly qualifies for an Opening bid of one no-trump. The hand contains 3½ honour-tricks with the plus value of the heart Queen.

2—East correctly reads the honour distribution as showing considerable honour strength in the South hand, with West and North probably weak. If West has the balance of strength, they may well be able to make a partial score, while South might make one no-trump if the bid were uncontested.

3—East struck oil. His partner's hand contains 2 honour-tricks and strong support for the heart bid. West reasons that if East was unwilling to permit South to play the hand at one no-trump, his hand must be quite strong. His strength is sufficient to justify a Raise.

4—Assured that his partner's hand contains support for the trump suit and other tricks as well, East bids for game.

In the play South opened the Ace of diamonds and followed with the King. If North can win a trick, the return of the diamonds will assure South of a trump trick. This manner of playing his diamond honours showed no more in that suit. South then shifted to the Queen of spades, which East won with the King and immediately returned the suit, winning with the Ace in the Dummy.

Another spade was led from Dummy and trumped in the closed hand. East now laid down the Ace of hearts and followed with the Knave. South covered and West won with the King. A small heart was led from the Dummy. East winning and South was void of trumps.

East now led his last diamond and trumped with Dummy's last trump. South discarding a club. This confirmed East in his reading of the distribution. He now led the 7 of spades from Dummy, discarding on it the 10 of clubs. South, forced into the lead, was compelled to lead a club as East, through his accurate play, had eliminated all other suits from his hand.

East, through avoiding the marked losing finesse in clubs, had assured the success of his contract.

CARDS OF EXIT AND ENTRY

Every Bridge player, who has passed beyond the neophyte class, realises the value of entry cards. Those who become expert realise the equal value of exit cards. An entry card is one which permits you access from one hand to the other. An exit card is one used to surrender the lead to an opponent. Obviously, Aces and Kings qualify as entry cards, but frequently the expert can make cards of entry out of even treys and four spots. The value of conserving cards of exit and entry is well illustrated in the hand which is discussed to-day.

1—Although East's hand contains a bare 1½ honour-tricks, the unusual length in the heart suit justifies the vulnerable Overcall.

2—West has adequate support for his partner's heart bid and gives a Raise.

3—Encouraged by his partner's assist, East boldly bids for game. Against the game contract, South opened the Ten of clubs. East refused to finesse as North's Opening no-trump bid marked the finesse as a loser. Besides, he had another use for the club queen.

The Ace heart was laid down and East was pleasantly surprised when the King dropped from the South hand. On this play, East was careful to play the five of hearts instead of the trey. The reason for this play also will appear later. Another round of hearts won by the Queen in the closed hand disposed of North's last trump and East then led a club, North winning. It was reasonably apparent to North that another lead to clubs would give East a ruff in one hand and discard in the other. Therefore, he next led the King of spades, upon which East played the Knave. Another round of spades would establish the spades in the Dummy, so North now shifted to the King of diamonds which East refused to win.

This plan of play assured East of his contract. North can make no lead that will give to him or his partner another trick. If a small diamond is led, it will be permitted to run to the Dummy. The lead of the Ace of spades would result in the establishment of the entire spade suit.

East, through carefully saving his smallest heart, has established a hidden entry in the Dummy Hand whereby that hand could contribute materially to the making of the contract. If East, on the first round of trumps, had carelessly played the trey, the game must have been lost, as East must have then lost two diamonds, one club and one spade. The lowly four spot in the Dummy had become as powerful as an Ace, because against the opponents it was the commanding card of the trump suit and the Declarer, through careful play, had retained a method of utilizing it.

MONEY FROM THEIR MISFORTUNES

Aristocrats Swindle Insurance Companies.

CAUGHT BURNING MOTOR-CAR

Belgrade.

A long series of clever insurance swindles has led to the arrest in Zagreb of a Russian noble from Astrakhan, Sergija Muhortov, and a former Austrian subject, Leonard, Baron Gitsl, who have been charged with the crimes.

Trading on their appearance and titles—Muhortov posed as a Russian general—they are said to have obtained valuable articles of furniture and attire on credit. These were insured for considerable sums with local insurance societies. Then one day their flat would be buried and the insurance claimed.

In a few months, no less than seven motor-cars, which they bought at second-hand and insured for twice their value, always under different names, were burned in mysterious accidents on roads in remote parts of the country. Though the insurance was claimed by different people, one of the occupants of the destroyed car was always either General Muhortov or Baron Gitsl.

In fact they seemed to be two most "unfortunate" people. Whatever they insured was always burnt or stolen within a short time.

This attracted the attention of the police who watched the couple and now claim to have caught them.

TURKEY'S CAMPAIGN AGAINST CARS

"Putting Money Into Foreign Pockets."

ROBBING STATE RAILWAYS

Istanbul.

A vigorous campaign against motor-cars and lorries is being conducted by the Istanbul newspaper, Republic.

It is alleged that much of Turkey's wealth has been uselessly squandered on foreign cars. £2,500,000 is stated to have been spent on the importation of cars, lorries, and spare parts during the last six years.

All this money, it is pointed out, has gone into the pockets of foreigners. Big sums have also been spent on petrol and oil which are also imported from abroad.

A further argument against the purchase of automobiles is that in Anatolia the motor coach services are taking away passengers from the State owned railways.

But, during the last 12 months, the import of cars and their accessories, has greatly decreased as owing to the high tariff levied on them. Actually, only a certain number of cars are allowed to enter Turkey every month and one dealer complained that his quota for May was 1½ cars.—Reuter.

Cure your teeth

from within—

KALZANA, the Calcium food, is the new idea in the care of the teeth. For many years people thought that a clean tooth could not decay. Yet however carefully we cleaned them they always did decay. For your teeth are living organs of the body; they may be weak, they may be ill and underfed. Through microscopic canals they get their food [calcium] from the blood.

Weak teeth give continuous trouble. By taking Kalzana, the calcium food, you can make your teeth strong and white and prevent decay.

A well-known dental surgeon writes: "Kalzana makes the teeth strong and hard and so stops tooth decay. I have often seen extraordinary results."

Keep your teeth clean with a dentifrice, but make them strong with Kalzana. Only then will you be really free from decay. Kalzana will make your teeth hard and healthy. Moreover, Kalzana strengthens the whole constitution and gives your whole body increased powers of resistance.

LITERARY NOTES

SCOTTISH LITERATURE

An Historical Survey.

Scottish literature, unlike English, has been the subject of so few treatises that the appearance of a new one, entitled "An Historical Survey of Scottish Literature," by Agnes Mure Mackenzie, M. A., is an event of interest.

Dr. Mackenzie, whose survey covers the earlier and richer half of that field, has written a lively book full of pride in the finer achievements and the European contacts of Scotland, personal enough to make one forget its considerable learning, and enlightened in its method of attack.

Barbour and his "Brus." Her chief end has been to sketch in the background of history, lacking which one tends to regard the poets of a country as so many isolated phenomena, even less comprehensible than men of genius. She succeeds. In the "Manchester Guardian." She succeeds. What she has to say about Barbour and his "Brus" is illuminating, and she handles the Makars well. She does not incidentally discover in Henryson's judgment of Cressid any fore-shadowing of the censorious spirit which she is quick to discover a hundred years later.

One regrets that she has so little time to linger over such things as Bellenden's captivating translations and none to mention Spalding, whose noble account of the execution of Strathford must be known to many.

Reformation Period.

Dr. Mackenzie will probably estrange many people fully conscious of what was ugly and savage in the Reformation by her frankly unsympathetic treatment of that movement. When Catholics waste time labelling the intolerance of Protestants it is the old game of the pot calling the kettle black. The more one considers the Reformation the more one asks how far the facile explanation it provides for the collapse of Scottish letters and for other national shortcomings since then will hold water.

MILLIONAIRE PRINCE OF PUBLISHERS

Death Of Mr. Cyrus Curtis.

Mr. Cyrus Hermann Kotzschmar Curtis, the millionaire head of the Curtis Publishing Company, and one of the most outstanding figures in the American newspaper world, died recently in Philadelphia at the age of 82.

Mr. Curtis was the owner of the "Saturday Evening Post," a weekly paper founded by Benjamin Franklin in 1728, and of other publications which have penetrated in millions to every quarter of the world. At the time of his death he was chairman of two separate companies, the Curtis Publishing Company, which owned the "Saturday Evening Post," the "Ladies' Home Journal," and other magazines; and the Curtis-Martin Newspapers Incorporated, the owners of the "Public Ledger" and the "New York Evening Post."

It is significant that Mr. Curtis's enormous success that in 1922 the advertisement revenue of his magazines, exclusive of his daily newspapers, exceeded $15,000,000. The foundation of Mr. Curtis's fortune was three cents, with which he bought three newspapers from a boy anxious to get rid of his stock, and promptly sold for three times what he paid for them.

LIFE OF FAMOUS EXPLORER.

Antarctic Epic Recalled.

No name is more honored in the epic of Antarctic exploration than that of Edward Adrian Wilson, the friend of Capt. Scott, and of that very gallant gentleman, Capt. Oates. A life of Wilson as the naturalist, the artist, and the man, has been written by Mr. G. Weaver and will be published by John Murray. Wilson blended deep religious feeling with heroic action, for he perished with Scott on the return journey from the South Pole.

Twelve Monarchs In Exile

Remarkable Pageant Of Unhappy Kings

ROYAL "MUSEUM PIECES"

(By Anthony Praga.)

"Kings in Exile." By Dr. Otto Ernst Jarrolds, 18/-.

"For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground
And tell sad stories of the death of kings."

WHEN Shakespeare wrote that he had not in mind the sad procession of disrowned rulers who, as it were, have died before their bodies.

Now, in this book of Dr. Jarrolds, comes a pageant of such unhappy monarchs, the tale of men who are to-day museum pieces—the waxworks of vanished royalty.

And what we know after the noise of that company has passed is an epitaph—the way of kings is marked by gravestones. Consider that figure who in 1914 ended the throat of death—Kaiser Wilhelm II.

Millions died because of his word; and now he chops wood in a Dutch forest, a peaceful old man who would not dream of being late for breakfast.

He regarded the Creator as his private valet; and insisted on being a hero to Him.

He behaved as if Christianity were part of the German language, and acted as though Potsdam were the headquarters of the new Jerusalem.

It took four years of immeasurable bloodshed to prove him wrong, and even now he has not learned his lesson.

Exiled, powerless, old he still keeps the ghost of his fallen majesty about him, and refuses to look at a world that has passed beyond his dreams.

The tale of his all but insane vanity is well told by Dr. Jarrolds. Wilhelm, in his own estimation, could talk better, play better, sing better, preach better, fight better, than any other man alive.

His vanity was fed by a group of sycophants as cynical as they were untruthful.

He was encompassed by a crowd of what Hollywood calls "Yes-Men"—mean souls whose whole object in life was to make themselves comfortable by being obsequious.

Not a breath of criticism, not a word of reality, ever passed their lips. They existed only to fill the ears of the Emperor with honey—a poison of soft words that nourished megalomania.

The blood of legions paid for that insane indulgence.

Fly Or Die.

And at last, in the dark hour of defeat, Wilhelm realized that he must fly or die. A storm was brewing in the place of kings, a riot of broken patience was fermenting in the hearts of what was left of his people.

In a rainy dawn, he stepped into a train (with cases of wine loaded into the luggage van), and went into exile in the land of a small and peaceful nation.

Now he is more than seventy; he still cuts down dumb and friendly trees, as once he cut down dumb and loyal men. Such characters do not change, even when their teeth are drawn and their claws blunted. They are not of the stuff of the great king, Charlemagne, who had the love of God in his eyes, and healing on his lips.

Consider that woman fanatic for royalty and power, the Empress Zita of Hungary.

She passionately loved her husband. She was early left a widow. She has eight children. Now her one absorbing life with life is the restoration to the throne of her ancient country of her son Otto.

She has for years planned, hurried, fought, rejoiced to that single end. In exile, in hardship, in defeat, her mind has followed the far illumination of a solitary star—the kingship of her son.

Nothing will turn her from her purpose. Nothing is ever likely to make her purpose fruitful. But she goes on, a woman whose unique prayer is for power.

Still she keeps her royal pretence about her. Still in the shadowy and diminished grandeur of royal shibboleths does she strive to maintain a simulacrum of Court life.

She is defeated. The world has moved beyond her, as it has moved beyond so many men and women who have mistaken a crown for the stuff of life.

She belongs to the past, and the ghost that she follows is the future.

And there is Ferdinand of Bulgaria, that mind instinct with high cunning.

He loves birds, he loves butterflies, he loves gardening. He cost his people sacks of difficult gold because he desired to grow lotus flowers on the ponds of his palace.

Romancer.

When in 1915 he was being besieged both by the Allies and the Central Powers, he at last decided—and decided wrongly—to throw in his lot with Germany.

It cost him his throne, but not his pleasure. After the war, he insisted on the payments for which he had obtained the guarantee of the Prussian Government, and exacted the last farthing.

He was, and is, for all his cunning, a romancer, a figure of regal pose, a man who believes in cabalistic mysticism, in necromancy and divination by the aid of powers from beyond the world. Now he lies gravely ill.

But the birds still flutter in the once royal cages, the lotus flowers fall on the still waters, the demons are yet silent to his call.

He is left only with pomp and the memory of majesty.

Take now that brave figure Alfonso XIII of Spain. He was a king from the moment of his birth, being a posthumous child. And he was a weakling—so weak that his mother made it a life-work to keep him alive.

But the young king developed, grew strong, grew to be an adept at healthy sports.

Then came his wedding day, in 1906, when he married an English Princess. They threw flowers into the royal carriage—great bouquets that flamed in the southern sunlight.

One of those bouquets contained a bomb. It burst in the roadway, killing horses and men. And the new Queen of Spain found her shoes all bespattered with fresh blood. The King escaped with his bride.

At last came definite revolution, and with it, flight.

Yet Alfonso declared in that grim instant of defeat, "I am the King of Spain and of all Spaniards. I do not renounce a single one of my royal rights."

A brave man, and a gentleman. Eleven of his exiled colleagues form the material of this calm and excellent book. Read there of the dim light that now beats upon ruined thrones.

A NEW JOURNAL.

"Population." Vol. 1, No. 1, June, 1933. (George Allen and Unwin) 2s. 6d. The problems of population led to a World Conference at Geneva in 1927, after which an International Union for the Scientific Investigation of Population Problems was formed. In 1928 the Executive Committee of the Union decided to start a journal and this is the first number. Most of the articles form part of the discussions at meetings of the British Association in 1931. Mr. G. H. L. F. Pitt-Rivers contributes a valuable article on "The Urgency of Population Study."

KEY BOOKS OF BRITISH AUTHORS

From "Eric" To "Man And Superman."

NOVEL PUBLICATION BY MR. DENIS ARCHER

Something of a novelty in book-making is Mr. Andrew Block's "Key Books of British Authors, 1600-1932," which has been published by Mr. Denis Archer. One may ask: What is a key book? but Mr. Block does not give us any clear definition; he says, "a work becomes a key book, and there is an end to it."

Joseph Conrad does not come within the scope of this volume because he is not British, and Henry James, Mr. Belloc, and others are barred for the same reason, writes Allan Monkhouse in the "Manchester Guardian."

One of the earliest names given is that of Mr. Lascelles Abercrombie, whose key book is given as "The Sale of St. Thomas," which he published in 1911. I think it is a beautiful poem, but it would have been interesting to hear why it is chosen. And in the case of Addison's "Cato" one does not get much help from the opinion of a critic that "his English lies liquid on the palate like a really happy port."

A MIXED BAG.

Key books appear to have been written by a great number of people of no importance, and it may be gratifying to find themselves listed with Shakespeare and Milton. Names forgotten or half-remembered crop up: here is Grace Aguilar with her "Home Influence," a story published in 1847 which had some vogue fifty years ago but might be permitted now to expire gently. Here, too, is Canon Farrar with his "Eric," surviving with a sort of ironical fame, and the author of "Bootsie Baby," which was praised by Ruskin.

G. P. R. James, Harrison Ainsworth, Charles Lever, and Captain Marryat are all here and they have written key books without being aware of it. In some cases the books take their places with obvious propriety; of course "The Rosary" is right for Mrs. Barclay, "Paradise Lost" for Milton, "The Old Wives' Tale" for Bennett, "Abraham Lincoln" for Drinkwater, "The Shropshire Lad" for A. E. Housman, and "Vanity Fair" for Thackeray.

Without being quite clear why key books are these may be included without hesitation. "Pickwick," too, is all right for Dickens, and perhaps Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice" may pass.

HARDY'S AND WELL'S.

Mr. Block might have told us why "Tess" is Hardy's key book, and we remain in some doubt as to Brett Young's "My Brother Jonathan," Mrs. Woolf's "Voyage Out," Briggshaw's "Garside's Career," and Philipps's "The Human Boy." There may be reasons for all these being classed as key books, but we don't bear what they are.

Mr. Wells's "Tono Bungay" is, perhaps, his finest novel, and Stevenson's "Treasure Island" laid the foundations of his fame; but these two books seem to have been chosen on quite different grounds.

That Bradshaw Time-tables should be selected in the case of Mr. George Bradshaw seems right and proper, but one wonders whether "Coningsby" or even "Sybil" is not more representative of Disraeli than "Lothair." I should differ from Mr. Block in his estimation of the importance of Gissing's "Henry Ryecroft"; surely his great work was in his novels of the "Grub Street" period. I wonder why "The Jew of Malta" is Marlowe's key book; it has some fine speeches, but it pales before the brutal grandeur of "Tamburlaine."

SHAW'S PHILOSOPHY.

One doesn't see in what sense "The Forsyte Saga" is a key book, or why "Man and Superman" is chosen, though it does for certain elements of Mr. Shaw's philosophy. It seems, however, that a key book must be chosen upon this simplest even though that production may have been little the product of Shaw's matured mind, and that it is chosen because of its importance in Shaw's life. It is quite as evident as many of those included, but perhaps it was impossible to find anything sufficiently outstanding by keybooks.

Over A Chunk Of Crockery

A Crime Story.

"At Ten Paces"—by Charles G. Booth, Hodder and Stoughton, London, 7s. 6d.

The body of Sebastian Durand is found on the floor of his antique shop. It is obviously murder; for though a challenge to a duel is found under his body, he has been shot in the back; and while clutching in his hand is an undischarged pistol at another chalk mark ten paces away lies a used pistol. That it is murder in cold blood there is no doubt, but each of the people who had a motive for murder had an "alibi."

Mystery Drama.

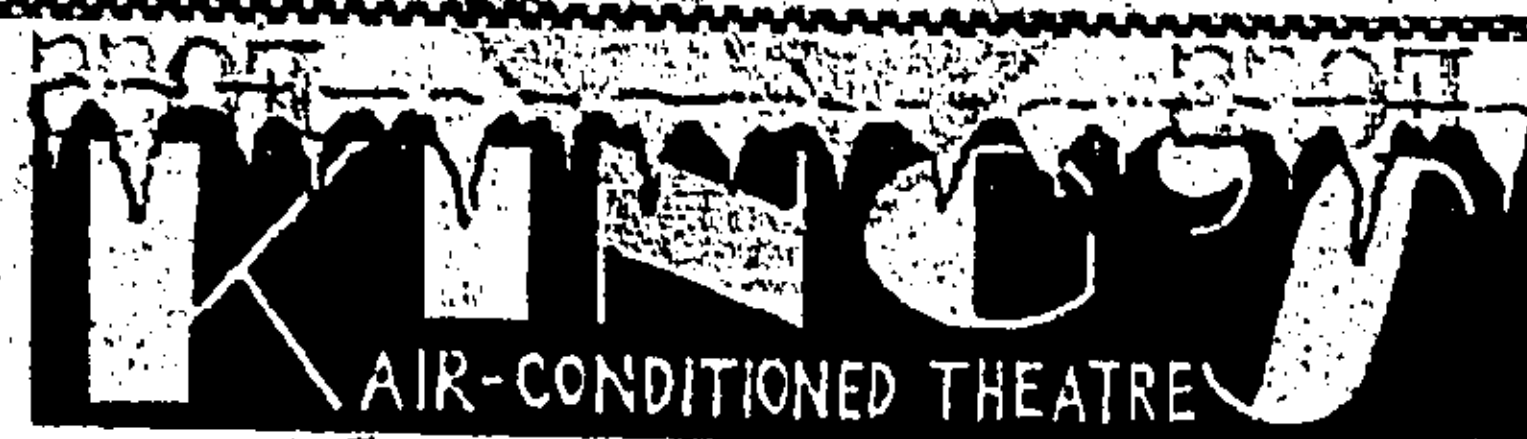

This is the ground plan upon which Mr. Booth has built his story—with for central pillar a covert piece of sculpture, a Phidian head. As he says: "It beats the devil how a chunk of crockery can get hold of a man's common sense." And so he proceeds to unravel the mystery, creating intriguing situations and scenes of almost dramatic power. As it turns out, the person to whom the crime is traced is not any of those whom motive pointed. But the solution is not reached till two more persons have come by their death—and they are interesting characters, an American born and bred, Chinese girl and her doddery husband, a thoroughbred Celestial still deep in worship of his ancestors.

Mystic Tea Ceremony.

How many Hong Kong readers have heard of the mystic tea ceremony of Japan? It is said that "A man who contemplates suicide may drink tea with his friends, break the cup and take his life." And here is something for the eye of the Tea Propaganda Board: "Not until they properly appreciated the aesthetic virtues of tea would the American people attain to a rich and ripe humanity."

MR. D. MAXWELL'S TWO BOOKS

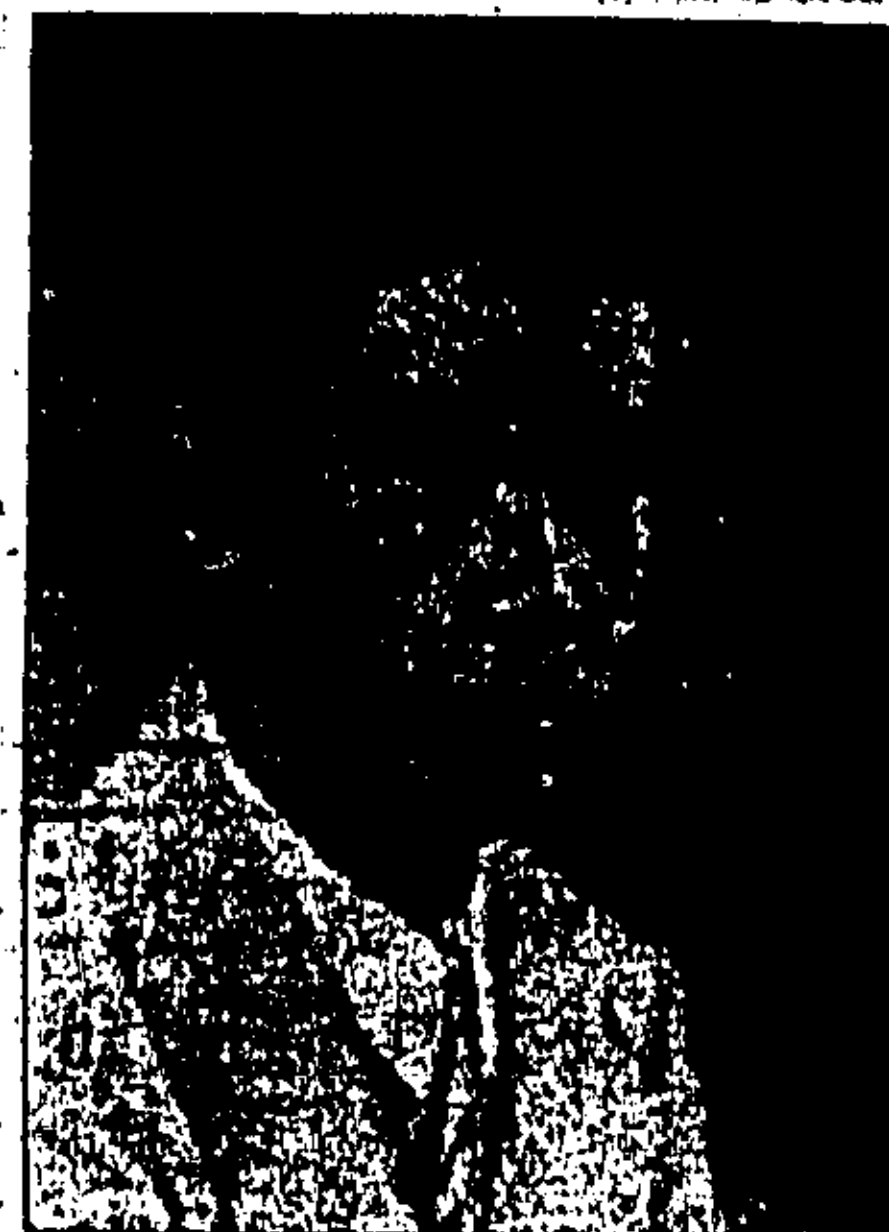

Mr. Donald Maxwell is an active man, both as artist and as author, and he has two books coming along. One is a "Domesday Book of Kent," and its pictures he is also doing in coloured clay tiles. The other is an exploration of "Unknown Buckinghamshire."

MARRIAGESANDERSON—CAMPBELL.—On September 2, 1933, at H.B.M. Consulate-General before A. G. N. Ogden, Esq., O.B.E., and at Holy Trinity Cathedral, Shanghai, by the Rev. V. G. Sutcliffe, and the Rev. E. R. Quick, Alma Bridget, eldest daughter of Mr. K. W. Campbell, of Shanghai, to James Ross, second son of Mrs. V. L. Sanderson, of London, and the late Mr. J. L. P. Sanderson, of Hankow.

instances to which he specially refers. Thorough preparation, it has been said a thousand times, is vital to the prospect of success in any international Conference, whose proper function it is to elaborate in detail, and to give effect to, purposes already concerted in their broad lines.

How does the Disarmament Conference answer to that requirement? After years of work, the Preparatory Commission had discovered no general lines of agreement; and its work was left to the Conference itself to do—with the results which were to be foreseen. As for the World Economic Conference, it is enough to mention the one fact, out of many telling in the same direction, that the vital lines of American monetary policy were never clearly disclosed until the delegates had been at work for some weeks; and that, when disclosed, they showed the Conference to be abortive. But it had another weakness, at which also Signor Mussolini glances.

The China Mail

Hong Kong, Monday, Sept 11, 1933.

Mussolini Attacks Conferences.

The failure of the London Conference has been followed by the appearance of an article on the subject of Conferences in general from the pen of Signor Mussolini. He has always been accustomed to form strong opinions, and to avoid understatement in the expression of them. "Enough of Conferences!" is the title he has chosen for this latest pronouncement. The view thus forcibly indicated is not of recent growth among the Duce's convictions. It was in 1922, within a few weeks of his coming to power in Italy; that he attended an Allies' Conference upon Reparations, and he was known then to have said that this, his first personal experience of the Conference method, would be his last. He writes now as one witnessing "the death-agony" of two Conferences, those of Geneva and London; "two sensational failures of European policy." This is characteristically said; and one may confess to profound disappointment with the results shown so far in both these cases without going all the way with Signor Mussolini in his comments on them and on the Conference method in general. But few will be found to disagree with the essence of his criticism, which appears in his commendation of the Four-Power Pact, and the mode of dealing with international questions which is contemplated by the Pact. There will not be, he declares, "two thousand delegates arguing round a table," but meetings of the responsible representatives of four States, "whose work will have been prepared beforehand in the chancelleries." He touches here on two of the besetting weaknesses which have done so much to discredit the Conference method: "weaknesses" which, in spite of a now extensive experience, continually recur, and notably in the two Miracle Of Mind.

The man who began in the street may seem a poor sort of creature, but he has a brain in which, according to Professor Herick of Chicago, there is a system of intercellular communication that transcends any mechanism of man's devising. Its vastness in scope is beyond conception even by the minds which they are equipped. We have of late been astounded and humbled by astronomical figures. We are told, for example, that it would take light traveling at something like 186,000 miles a second, 400,000,000 years to reach the farthest star known to the largest telescope; and that the earth is but an infinitesimal atom in the universe. We have been ready to exclaim in humility: "What is man that he should pretend to rival him?" But when we learn that even the most minute atom in the street has such an intricate apparatus in his head, we realize that human beings

HERE, THERE

EVERYWHERE*A Tube Station Memory
Even a Tube station may have its "one brief hour of glorious life." British Museum Station, which was recently closed down by decree of the new London Passenger Transport Board, flashed into world notoriety twenty years ago through one of the smartest police captures on record.

It was on July 17, 1913, that the news came to light of the theft of Mr. Max Meyer's necklace of pearls, worth £150,000, and two days later New Scotland Yard was offering £10,000 reward for information. The jewels were traced through the post from Paris to Hattingdon, and had then disappeared.

After many false rumours and genuine surprises, including the finding of the necklace in a matchbox in a London gutter, the gang of four were rounded up in British Museum Station and arrested.

"Cammi" Grizard, the arch-conspirator, and his chief accomplice, Jim Lockett, got seven years' penal servitude each, and the others five years and eighteen months.

The Rothschilds

Baron Louis Rothschild's resignation of the presidency of the Credit Anstalt removes from the direction of the bank a name which has been identified with its destinies for more than a hundred years.

The fame of the Rothschilds in the world of finance has become legendary since the day in the middle of the eighteenth century when Mayer Amschel Rothschild as a penniless child of 11 set out to earn his living.

The founder of the English branch of the family was Mayer's son, Nathan. It was the original Mayer who devised the family motto, "Concordia, Integritas, Industria."

received more attention than all the rest of creation from the Maker. We are further reminded that "these arrangements" of the system of communication in the human brain "are not haphazard." They are orderly, and "the laws of this order can be discovered," as some already have been. Beholding such a miracle of equipment for the human mind, one is the more ready to accept the conclusion reached by the learned mathematician and preacher, the Bishop of Birmingham, in his recent scholarly work on "Scientific Theory and Religion": "Nature is not to be likened to a blind giant, irrational, purposeless, knowing neither good nor evil. She is God's witness; and we, as children of her womb, brought forth by the divine power that we may be come sons of God."

GREAT ASSYRIAN
EXODUS STARTS
OLD TESTAMENT RACE
FIND NEW HOME*STILL STRANDED AMONG ENEMIES

"The Assyrians in Iraq who have just started the greatest exodus since the time of Pharaoh, are the remnant of that once mighty nation of whom we read in the Old Testament," writes a correspondent in the "Daily Telegraph."

Like Abraham, they came originally from Ur of the Chaldees, but they differed markedly from their kinsmen, the Babylonians, in character. They were more robust, warlike, and fierce than the cultured and industrial people of the south, and were essentially a military folk.

So it came about that when the Medes and Persians followed up their conquest of Babylon by the destruction of Nineveh in 606 B.C., the Assyrians, in order to escape oppression in the lowlands, fought their way to the Hakkia Mountains of Kurdistan, and lived there for centuries, a small nation but perpetuating their race and holding their own against all comers.

Meanwhile, their other kinsmen, the Chaldeans, who had been driven out of Babylon, and settled in the foothills and plains under these mountains, and there their descendants have remained until the present time. Thus was the Chaldeo-Assyrian nation, though of common origin and of the same religion, separated into two sections, the Assyrian Highlanders and the Chaldean Lowlanders.

Early Christians

I will not dwell on their history between that period and our own time, except to mention that the Assyrian Church dates from the first century A.D., and was the first organised national Christian community in the world. Apostolic customs and traditions are still preserved, and its liturgical books and its teachings are still in Aramaic, the language which Jesus Christ spoke, and in which the earliest Christian documents were written.

It is very little realised that the greatest missionary effort in the world's history was carried out by the Assyrian Church, that it carried Christianity and education right across Asia into China, to Ceylon, India, Egypt, Afghanistan, Turkestan, Siberia, and that at one time there were more Christians belonging to the Assyrian Church than in the rest of the world.

On the outbreak of war in 1914 the Assyrians formed a compact community of some 150,000 persons in the Hakkia mountains of Kurdistan. They were subjects of the Ottoman Empire, but were governed by their own Patriarch, and free to follow their religion and customs.

Although so far from centres of civilisation, great progress in education and modern life was being made, owing to the wonderful aid received from the Archbishop of Canterbury's Mission to the Assyrians.

Alone Among Enemies

Then came the entry of Turkey into the war as an enemy of Great Britain, and immediately the situation was changed. Here was a body of 150,000 Christians, hemmed in by and apparently at the mercy of enemies, who saw at last an opportunity to wipe them out of existence without antagonising their mutual Sovereign Lord, the Sultan of Turkey. It is true the Assyrians were not at first called upon to fight on behalf of Turkey, and were promised neutrality if they kept quiet.

But with the extension of the operations of war, they were influenced to take up arms on behalf of the Allies, and the great decision was at last made to cut their way through their enemies' and all together, men, women and children, move en masse into Persia to join up there with the Christian Russian Army.

This they did—at a cost—and effected a junction at Urmia, where they were heartily welcomed, and equipped for service. They did magnificent work, and all went well until the Russian Revolution, when the Russian armies were recalled, and the Assyrians were again alone in the midst of enemies.

A Flying Refuge

Then came that wonderful rescue which eventually brought them to

Mesopotamia at Baghdad—under British occupation—but alas, only 60,000 souls of the original 150,000. Surely a heavy price to pay to preserve their faith intact. Are there many people in the world to-day who would do so much for their religion?

During four years of British occupation and ten years under the protection of the British mandate over the Kingdom of Iraq, they have remained exiles in an alien country, the only allies of Great Britain who have not been repatriated or resettled.

By decree of the League of Nations, to its everlasting shame, their lands, homes, villages, churches and all belongings were handed to Turkey, whom they had been instrumental in defeating. All their priceless ancient liturgical books in ancient Aramaic were destroyed. The Assyrians were informed by the League of Nations that they could return to their homes, but as subjects again of Turkey, who at that very time was massacring every Assyrian man, woman and child in reach.

At this time it was expected that there would be a British Mandate over the Mosul Vilayet, in Iraq, for twenty-five years. The Assyrians who had fought for and trusted Britain looked to the protection of the flag.

Assyrians in Iraq

In November, 1929, Great Britain announced that she proposed that the mandate over Iraq should come to an end in 1932, last year. All the minorities in Iraq at once took fright and the people appealed to me to come to their aid.

In January, 1930, I went to Mosul and lived among the people, and saw for myself the actual conditions under which they were existing. The Assyrians took counsel together and decided that the only action possible was to present a petition to the League of Nations.

The proper course was for the minorities concerned to make it through the mandatory Power's representative in the country, which meant that the signatories of the complaints would become known to the ruling authorities, Arabs. To take such action meant that their lives would be seriously endangered. I therefore returned to England with the intention of taking action in London.

The next thing that happened was the publication of the Treaty of Baghdad, dated June, 1930, between Great Britain and Iraq, to come into force when the mandate was terminated.

The Chinese volunteers are continuing their anti-Manchukuo activity in eastern Kirin by carrying out a series of raids on towns and villages where Japanese and Manchukuo garrison troops are sparse. On Saturday morning 400 Chinese volunteers made a surprise attack on Imienpo and a brisk battle ensued. The battle lasted about one-and-a-half hours, with the result that both sides suffered a number of casualties and a Japanese armoured car was destroyed.

The volunteers withdrew after succeeding in raiding a quantity of foodstuffs. Other similar raids are reported to have taken place in the past few weeks, but the strict censorship of news telegrams in Manchuria allows little to leak out. —Central News Agency.

AMERICAN RECOGNITION
OF SOVIETOfficial U.S. Study
Of Problems.MINISTER TO SWEDEN TO MAKE SURVEY

Washington.

It is understood here that the United States government is going to make an official study of the problems involved in recognition of Soviet Russia.

Lawrence Steinhardt, Minister to Sweden, sailed recently for Europe for that study. The announcement of his specific mission was made at the White House. Many hold that it added force to arguments that America's more friendly relations might bring official recognition of the land of Communism.

Previously, the Reconstruction Corporation with the President's approval announced loans of around $4,000,000 to finance the sale of American cotton to Russia. Again some months ago, Mr. Roosevelt addressed to the Soviet, along with other nations, a plan for peace. It was the first time in many months that there had been such an official admission of the Soviet's existence.

When Mr. Steinhardt begins his survey, he will find Russian debts and propaganda activities the chief arguments for non-recognition in the past.

Millions Defaulted

After the last war was overthrown, the United States extended an $187,000,000 credit to the provisional government which took over. That was repudiated, together with about $400,000,000 of Czarist obligations held by American citizens. The provisional government floated an additional $86,000,000 in bonds which also were defaulted.

It is believed that the Soviet now may offer to do something about these debts. If so, the Soviet may be granted a place on the list being drawn up by the United States State Department of other nations which have asked opportunities to discuss their debts.

Only those nations which have recognized their obligations by partial payments are on that list. Some officials here believe that a payment by Russia would qualify her for the list.

Settlement Must Be Made

For many years there have been no official Russian-American negotiations about the Russian debts. Recent administrations have held that these obligations must be admitted before the United States can recognize the Soviet. In fact, the American attitude up to the present has been that:

1. A settlement must be made.
2. The Soviet must cease spreading propaganda designed to bring the overthrow of the American Government.

In the past, periodic speculation that the United States was moving toward recognition brought at least semi-official denials. But there have been no such denials from the present administration.—Reuter.

Canton, to-day.

General Chen Chi-tong held an important conference at his private residence yesterday with a number of military leaders, including General Li Chung-jen, Commander of the Kwangsi Group Army, and General Tang Shih-tseng, who represented the Fukien military authorities. Discussions were mainly confined to the "Red" suppression problem in the Kwangtung-Fukien border districts.

General Tang Shih-tseng is reported to have requested the Canton Government to immediately despatch a strong force into Fukien to assist the Nineteenth Route Army. The Canton leaders, however, think inadvisable to send an expedition into Fukien owing to the lack of transport facilities in the Kwangtung-Fukien border districts.

As the result of long discussions, the Canton leaders have at last promised to draft a number of military planes from the Fifth and Second Air Squadrons at Mui-hien, eastern Kwangtung, to Fukien, to carry out an air attack on the "Reds." —Central News Agency.

To-Day's Short Story.GHOSTS AND JOSSERSBy W. F.
Harvey.

LAUGHING and out of breath the three boys ran into the shelter of the dark tower.

The first heavy drops of thunder rain had fallen as they breasted the bare hill where Gander's Folly stuck out like a helmet spike. As they crossed the threshold it came beating down, a drop-curtain lowered viciously over the rich August landscape. A minute later and they would have been drenched to the skin.

"My giddy aunt!" said Woolley, as he threw himself down on the low stone seat. "What wouldn't I give for a good long lemon squash! Pippa, you rotter, what do you mean by saying that we would do it in two hours?"

"So we could have done, if we had taken the short cut through the wood. I'm thirsty right enough, but my first love is a cigarette, and I don't mind betting that none of you blighters have got such a thing."

The stranger in the corner, whom they had not noticed, took out his case.

"Allow me to include myself among the blighters," he said with a smile, as he passed it round. "Do you know this district well?"

"Only Pippa, sir," said Black. "He's a native, and we're only staying with him. He told us, if we got to the top, we should see the sea. Pippa is mad on the sea."

"It's a grand view on a clear day," said Pippa enthusiastically. "On the night of the Diamond Jubilee we could see beacons burning in seven counties."

"And nearly all of the minor counties," Woolley added, "with not a first-class cricketer among them."

"Well, anyhow, they are better than a lot of professionals who think of nothing but their averages. I wonder if they have got this rain at Taunton. It would be just like Yorkshire's luck if they managed to make a draw of it when Somerset had got them on toast."

For five minutes the talk was cricket.

"Any sign of it stopping?" asked Woolley, with a yawn.

CENTENARIAN CHALLENGER

Pueblo Colorado.

H. Briggs, from down Oklahoma way, likes to hear the youngsters yell when he shows forth in his swimming outfit. He's willing to take on all comers and able to give most of them a run for their money. Briggs declares he is 101 years old.

Black thrust his head out of the stone archway.

"Not for a quarter of an hour. Not a sign of blue sky. Lend me a knife, one of you fellows. I want to try my hand at carving."

"Don't you think the roll of honour is long enough already?" said the stranger. "Have pity on poor old Gander's Folly. I propose a game. Do any of you know how to play Ghosts and Jossers?"

The three boys, with no obviously marked enthusiasm for enlightenment, confessed their ignorance.

"It's quite a good game and easily learned. You begin with a letter and go round in turn with the object of making somebody else complete a word. If you end a word, you lose a life. You have three lives each and when they are all forfeited you become a ghost."

"Where do the jossers come in?" asked little Black.

"The jossers are the ones who are still alive. They forfeit a life each time they speak to a ghost, since it is unlawful to hold communion with the dead. I think that's about all. Proper names are allowed. You'll soon get into the game, once we have started."

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's story will be "The Pylon," by Bernard J. Farmer.

"What about a handicap, sir?" said Woolley. "Spelling isn't our strong point, and these are the holidays."

"Yes, you are new to the game and a handicap is only fair. I'll take one life to your three. Black, you begin. You can choose any letter, and the rest of you when it comes to your turn take care that you don't finish a word or it may finish you."

Pippa was the first to die.

"It's not so bad being a ghost," he said, with a laugh. "I'm going to explore up aloft, though I expect the rooms will all be locked. Don't be frightened if you hear noises!"

They heard his footfall as he climbed the spiral stair.

Then little Black spelled out his fate.

"Pippa, old boy," he shouted, "come down from there and watch poor Woolley put up the fight of his life. It won't be long before he's with us."

The handicap was too small. In another minute Woolley had joined the ghosts.

"And now," said the stranger, "I think I will be going. The rain will be over in five minutes, and it will take more than that to get through my macintosh. Good-bye, boys. I hope some day we shall meet again on Gander's Folly, and that it will be clear enough for Pippa to point out to me the seven minor counties and the sea."

"Not a bad sort of a chap," said Woolley, when he had gone. "What would you put him down as?"

Black suggested a bishop in muffin on a walking tour. "But then he wouldn't have given us the cigarettes," he added.

Pippa said that he was a bloated capitalist, and that a motorcar would be waiting for him at the foot of Ringland's Hill.

"And I," said Woolley, "should class him as a lawyer. Look how he got the all into a corner and didded us with those impossible words. I don't think much of his beatty game. What was that place that did you in, Pippa?"

"Coronel. I'd never heard of it; but he said it was somewhere in South America—Peru or Chile. And the worst of it was, I thought I had got him with Coronas, those cigars you know, that you see advertised in 'Punch.' He caught out Black too, in some outlandish place. What was it, Blacky?"

"Gallipot. I was going to have had Gallipot, and he would have ended the word on the 't.' I was doubly done in over that, because I completed a word with 'Gall,' only Woolley didn't notice it. It's the bitter stuff you drink, you know."

"It was Macdonald that did me," said Woolley. "And jolly young Jack that's place I'd already ever heard of, somewhere over by Tibet should be some place. I'd afraid we didn't stop at this silly old game. What's young Pippa up to?"

Derby Winner The St. Leger Favourite

Scarlet Tiger Expected To Extend Hyperion

TRACK AGAINST LORD DERBY'S
HORSE

THE present dry spell is already having its effect upon the chances of the various St. Leger candidates. Owing to his leg trouble the restricted preparation of the favourite, will be hampered all the more by the hard state of the ground and many other fancied colts have only been doing light work.

Lord Derby's colt has already travelled to double the odds on offer against his chance a month ago. It is reasonable, however, to suppose that, if the rain comes and Hyperion suffers no further breakdown, he will start at very cramped odds on Wednesday. Hyperion has already demonstrated that he is the outstanding colt of the year.

After his wonderful victory at Epsom there were those who persisted that so small a colt—he measured scarcely more than fifteen hands—must be deficient in stamina and that this would be proved when the animal raced over a more severe track.

In going in marked contrast to the granite-like surface at Epsom, Hyperion followed up his classic success by winning the Prince of Wales's Stakes at Ascot over one mile 5 furlongs. He shouldered nine stone 5 lbs. on this occasion—no small burden for a horse of such limited physical scope—and the manner of his victory proved that he is a horse of outstanding merit.

It is an old racing axiom that a good horse can act in any sort of going—few will argue that Hyperion by his winning performances at Epsom and Ascot can be faulted on this score.

Even so there are a few people who consider that over the galloping Doncaster track the Stanley House colt will be at distinct disadvantage and it is to be hoped that, if only to prove the "doubters" wrong, last of the season's classics.

Scarlet Tiger sent his stock soaring by reason of his recent impressive victory in the Midsummer Stakes over 1 mile at Newmarket. This son of Colorado rather blotted his copy-book when beaten so easily by Canon Law at Ascot but this performance might well be overlooked. Scarlet Tiger had just taken part in the Derby—a strain that often leaves its mark upon a contestant for some weeks to come. Canon Law, by his subsequent performances, seems to prove that he was flattered by the result for he has done nothing of note since.

At Newmarket Scarlet Tiger had obviously benefitted from the rest afforded him since Ascot. Only three horses turned out to oppose him but amongst them was the redoubtable Brown Betty and the filly was beaten pointlessly. It is true that the filly was conceding Scarlet Tiger 12 lbs. but she is about the fastest animal in the country up to a mile. Thus the trial can be considered to have considerably advanced the claims of Scarlet Tiger for the St. Leger. He is a big horse hardly suited to the twisting Epsom track and he might easily give Hyperion more to do than in the Derby.

At one time it was thought that King Salmon would play a big part in the decision of the last of the season's classics but Sir Hugo Cumfere Owen's colt appears to have "rained off."

Even so it is to be doubted whether this Salmon Trout colt is possessed of the requisite stamina. Harry Wraggs has always ridden this colt as if there was a doubt as to the animal's staying ability. Canon Law, Young Loyal and Belfry all have their admirers but it is difficult to estimate on what grounds these animals can be fancied.

Hyperion should be capable of winning the race even on a limited preparation but Scarlet Tiger is bound to "hurdle him" up in the closing stages—better (Mall).

Most people, I am afraid, imagine that for play is a simple matter, but the truth is that it is by no means easily conquered and there is much more in it than meets the eye. It demands qualities of thought and movement as well as of considerable judgment and it is not to any player who had that they can make good use of their legs to do so. If they feel that they are strong, they play by force so—Hyperion.

PERCY ALLISS WINS GERMAN OPEN

Cotton Fails In Last
Two Rounds.

Bad Ems, Aug. 14.

Percy Alliss (Beaconsfield), who was for some years professional to the Wannsee Club, Berlin, to-day won the German open golf championship with an aggregate of 284 for the 72 holes.

Alliss played very steadily all the way through, but for some short approaches and weak putting by H. Cotton, however, the Beaconsfield player might not have won the championship.

At the end of the third round Alliss led Cotton by four strokes, their aggregates being 213 and 217. Havers also had 217 at the end of the third round. Boomer had 221, and A. Boyer, the winner last year, was equal with E. Roberts, of Stockholm, with 222.

Alliss started the last round confidently. He did the outward half in 37. Grim determination brought him home in 34, to give him a last round of 71.

At the thirtieth (380 yards) he was stymied at some bushes. He made a wonderful recovery and holed out in 4. He did the long fourteenth (486 yards) in 4, one under-par. His drive and a second pin-high were perfect. A 3 at the sixteen (304 yards), too, was wonderful golf.

Course Record By Frenchman.

The French professional, M. Dallenmagne, of St. Germain, set up a new course record with a final round of 67, beating by one stroke the record set up by A. Boomer, yesterday.

A. McNair finished as the leading amateur with 304. He played a steady game throughout, though he had the misfortune, in the third round to be among the competitors who started before the heavy mist cleared. In some instances he had to play the holes blind.

Boomer experienced bad luck in the third round. He took 80. His shots were good but he was unfortunate in his lies. Both Cotton and Havers played well right through. Bad luck, rather than bad judgment, was, against the latter in the last round.—Reuter.

Lou Gehrig hit his 29th homer of the season in the second game against Detroit. He is now leading Babe Ruth and is 11 behind Jimmy Foxx, 1932 home run king, in the home run parade.

The best previous average time for a Harmsworth event was 77.390 mile, made by the Miss America IX. Last year the Miss America X won from Kaye Don's, Miss England III at the speed of 73.762 miles an hour.

The Miss America X was a stronger and more powerful boat this year than before.

Government aviation experts and racers aided the veteran speed racer in strengthening the hull and the mechanical parts of the craft for the most severe punishment any boat in the world has to take. The entire hull was rebuilt so that it was three or four times as strong. An entirely new addition to the hull was an "arch," a four-layer laminated wood structure built on the keel.

A complete reconditioning of the motors, under the direction of Packard engineers, who built them, also helped.

Essentially the engines remained the same as before, but it was estimated that slight changes added from 50 to 100 horse-power to each of the four 1,600 horse-power motors.—United Press.

Jimmy Foxx's homer for the Athletics against the Indians on Saturday were his 40th and 41st this season. Last year he won the home run crown from Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig with a total of 51.

British Players Win In Straight Sets.

Before 8,000 spectators on Saturday Fred Perry beat L. J. Stoeffen by 6-3, 6-3, 6-2 in the Semi Final Round. The American suffered the heaviest defeat of his career against an opponent who revealed brilliant form on both hands to keep him constantly on the run.

Playing his steadiest game with a machine-like backhand Jack Crawford beat Frank X. Shields, the American favourite, by 7-5, 6-4, 6-3. The Australian was much more accurate than Shields who played a fast game throughout, though his backhand shots went out with monotonous regularity.—Reuter.

PROMISING SOCCER TALENT FOR CLUB

CENTRE HALF PROBLEM TO SOLVE

ARTILLERY GREATLY WEAKENED SIDE THIS YEAR

(BY OUTSIDE LEFT.)

THE Hong Kong football season made an unofficial start on Saturday when the first and second elevens of the Hong Kong Football Club and the Royal Artillery met in friendly games on the former's ground. The result was a win for the Gunners' senior team by the odd goal in five and a win for the Club's second string by the odd goal in three.

THE Club failed to field the teams advertised, Down, a promising newcomer, being in hospital, while Hills, who was also to play, failed to make an appearance.

THE Club gave a fairly sound display, although they will need to improve various departments if they are to offer a serious challenge to the Chinese this season.

S. FOWLER, who made his debut for the Club between the sticks, showed complete confidence and set about his task in a fearless manner, diving and clearing well. With a little more practice he should develop into a first class-go's custodian.

HYNES, who usually plays half, but who partnered S. Strange at right back, gave a very sound display and should prove a valuable acquisition to the Club in his new position. S. Strange, the skipper, was handicapped owing to an injured knee, but, nevertheless, showed his former brilliance to advantage, and still showed a turn of speed when called upon.

S. Strange.

ANDY DUNCAN, one of the Club's veterans played a splendid game and is still the best half the Club possess. His feeding of his wing left nothing more to be desired and his spilling tactics were very sound.

WRIGHT, who also made his debut in the Club's soccer side, was entirely out of the picture throughout the game. He was too slow on his feet in his tackling. F. Fowler who played on the left wing for the Club last season played on the opposite wing on Saturday, but did not prove a success. He was too fond of passing backward, but improved towards the end of the game when he sent across several splendid centres, one of which was responsible for the Club's second goal.

Fowler showed himself to be a dangerous spoiler and would do well as a half. One glaring mistake of his was to lie too far back and then find himself entirely out of position when a pass came his way.

DOMINY, who was playing in his new position, at inside right, is still at fault in being too slow in passing and overfond of changing over with the right wing. He, however, gave a good display.

BOBBY SHAW FAILS IN BIG MATCH AT LORD'S

Scores of 5 and 0 FOR Navy Against Army

Capt. R. J. Shaw, who has played for the Navy in the Hong Kong Cricket League during the past two years and who hit five centuries in that period, scored 5 and 0 for the Royal Navy against the Army at Lord's last month. The Army, for whom H. S. Hudson scored 118, won by 9 wickets to record their thirteenth win in the series.

ALBERT HOWE (Club)

HOWE is just as good as he was last season, and his first goal was a brilliant solo effort culminating in a ground shot which had Combeys beaten all the way. In the first half he was pretty much out of the picture owing to the fact that E. Strange was too intent in taking the ball into the goalmouth instead of passing.

HOWE showed a good example when he put in some lovely drives from within shooting range, all of which were dangerous.

E. STRANGE has shown an improvement this year by helping his halves—and then taking the ball up himself. He is still one of the fastest, if not the fastest forward in Hong Kong, but should endeavour to combine better with his centre forward, Howe, who was starved throughout the first half.

BICKFORD, Kowloon's former outside left, proved himself to be the most valuable newcomer to the Club. He was very accurate in his centres and his positional play was very promising.

HE kept well down the field and was always ready for a pass from his inside or halves.

COMBEY, in goal for the Gunners, is still the same brilliant custodian. He showed himself to be last season, and should prove invaluable to a team which has been weakened in defence by the absence of Taylor.

ALLAN, the Interport full back, played a fine game and proved the better of the two backs. Wroe, a newcomer falling badly with ground shots and lacking positional sense.

ALLAN showed great coolness under pressure, and sent up some very neat passes to his halves, while Wroe was just content to clear the ball, sending it anywhere.

RODGER and Worthington proved to be two good wing halves, but could improve their play if they took the ball up to about the 25 yards mark instead of sending neat passes from the half way line which are apt to be intercepted.

THE Gunners' greatest weakness lay in their forwards who were very much out of the picture. The goals they scored were all from set pieces. Edmunds showed himself to be the most promising forward, but his shooting powers will have to be improved, while Spooks, Greenfields, Walker and Seal were slow in combination and passed wildly.

THE Club's second eleven had several new "finds" on view among whom were Fisher on the right wing, Simmonds in goal, Williams, centre forward, and Black on the left wing.

JAPANESE GIRL SETS NEW AQUATIC TIME

World's Record for 200 Metres Breast Stroke

Tokyo, Sept. 3.
Hideko Mayehatma, Olympic swimmer, did the breast-stroke, 200 meters, in 3 minutes, 5.2 seconds in a 50-meter pool in the all-Japan women's swimming meet at Nagoya today.

This beat the record of 3 minutes, 6.3 seconds set at Los Angeles last year by Clare Dennis of Australia, to whom the Japanese girl was second.

China May Play Philippines On May 19

Football At 1934 Manila Games.

INDO CHINA MAY ENTER TEAM

The Far Eastern soccer football schedule has drawn up by the P. A. A. F. football committee for the 1934 Manila Games.

The committee first undertook to draw up the Far Eastern football schedule with three teams entered. This routine calls for the first game to be played on May 12, the second game on May 16 and the third game on May 19. In accordance with the requirement the Philippines should play Japan on May 12 and China on May 19.

A schedule of four teams was also drawn in case French Indo-China will participate. This list provides for six playing days.

From difficult angles. He is also a good tackler and would probably fill the left half position with greater success.

MANNING RAILTON, a veteran of the Club and skipper of the second team, was quick in intercepting passes and proved a dangerous spoiler at all periods of the game.

Blinnie, who made his debut for the Club at left back, did not give a very good display and was inclined to take first-time shots when he had ample time for a good clearance. He was fearless in his tackling, but needs right-foot kicking practice.

LOWE, Boyd and Krilovsky, the Club's halves were hard tacklers, but a poor trio. Their feeding of the forwards was weak and lacked sense of direction, each man showing an inclination to boot the ball in any direction regardless of the direction of play.

GEOFFREY LAMBERT, the Club's rugged player filled a large-made up the inside vacancy and did exceedingly well. His fine turn of speed was a definite asset, and he was able to dribble with confidence. His goal was a spectacular piece of work reminiscent of many of his scores on the rugby field.

THE Gunners had some good players on view, the halves, Hunt, Collier and Stevens, playing brilliantly to overshadow the opposing forwards.

WHARTON between the sticks proved reliable, while Gibbons and Price, though not nervous were over-confident at times and as a result left Wharton in a dangerous position on several occasions. For the forwards, Leach, and Hill the left wing combinations were the best, particularly the former, who amazing swerves often left Ralston standing.

THE Artillery have a good junior side this year. Better understanding among the forwards and between the halves would, however, greatly improve the team.

Dates For The Big Matches.

The monthly meeting of the Association will be held in the Association Office, Messrs. Perry Smith, Beth and Fleming, 3, Des Voeux Road, C. (4th floor) on Monday, 18th instant, at 8.30 p.m.

The business includes the following:—Mr. Carrington, the Governor, who will arrange the Armistice Day match to draw for the Tai Wah Cup.

LUZ'S BRILLIANCE IN INTERPORT PRACTICE

Coates And Chalmers Prominent.

BEER'S FINE DRAWING SHOTS

(By SHORT HEAD.)

R. F. Luz, runner-up in the open Championship was in great form in the Interport Practice bowls match on the Craigengower green on Saturday, his experience on the same green on Wednesday in the final of the Open being of great value.

In a tie against A. Hyde Lay, Luz was continually narrow, his woods appearing to have excessive bias. On Saturday, however, the Recreio skip had the green well sized up, and his drawing shots were brilliantly executed especially when a delicate wood was required.

The teams were hardly up to Interport form; another game or so with the players in the same positions should do much to improve the standard of play.

SEVEN TO WIN LAST HEAD.

Commencing the last end at 15—all W. Glendon's four (J. Johnson, W. McLeod, and J. S. Riddell) registered a seven against R. R. Wood's Civil Service rink (J. M. Purvis, J. Fitzgerald, and R. R. Davies).

The Police triumph was one of the big surprises of the day.

A fresh wind blowing straight down the green from the Valley end was gusty and had a great effect on the woods. Very often, although played gently, a shot would go dead straight, and not curve in at all.

The outstanding player was, without a doubt, R. F. Luz, and A. E. Coates and J. C. Chalmers ably backed him up, both players often trailing the Jack. Cullen played obediently to skip's orders, blocking accurately with well-placed shots. This rink should do well in the Interport.

Although the score against them was very big—21 shots—Omar's rink played fairly well. B. W. Bradbury and J. C. Brown being outstanding. U. M. Omar was a trifle unlucky in a number of his shots. Whether a drive or a delicate draw was required, his effort was invariably just an inch or so to the wrong side.

The game between Adam Holland and A. W. Grimmett was a battle of wits, the narrow margin separating the teams, and the low scoring all being the result of carefully planned tactics. Individually, the players were good, with H. Beer outstanding—this player's drawing shots repeatedly rested by the Jack.

SHANGHAI INTERPORT CRICKETERS

THE following were the feats with bat and ball of potential Shanghai Interport cricketers, who will visit Hong Kong in November, on Saturday, September 2:

P. Madar 23 out of 88 and 6 for 28 v. Shafores.
S. E. Kermani 3 v. Shafores.

J. A. Isaac 1 for 25 out of 113 v. Nomads.

Keen Struggle For Junior Title.

ALL-IMPORTANT GAME NEXT SATURDAY

(By SHORT HEAD.)

Craigengower's defeat by 33 shots at the hands of the Bowling Green caused a big surprise in the Junior bowls league on Saturday, and, should the Civil Service beat the champions in their last fixture on the C. C. C. green next Saturday, a third match between Craigengower and the K.B.G.C. will be played in order to decide the championship.

The chances of the Civil Servants on the champions' green are, however, not very bright. In their first encounter this season, on their own green, they lost to their neighbours by 25 shots, and on Saturday they provided the Police with two surprise points.

On Saturday the Bowling Green won on all three rinks in the most convincing manner.

H. G. Sherriff bowled exceedingly well to record his first win of the season, and he and H. V. Pearce were the outstanding "skips."

On the 12th head Sherriff lay 4, but Pearce saved 2 by a splendid draw when all approach seemed closed. Similarly Sherriff reduced a lay of 4 to 2 on the 15th head. On the 8th he took the jack to the ditch to register 1. Pearce was good at trailing.

Led 11-7 on the ninth end Sherriff's four (G. Chambers, C. E. Farmer, and J. Roger) came on level terms at the 12th, and then took the lead to win by 8 shots.

E. C. Elliott Heywood gave his rink a good start by drawing well throughout. On the 9th head he drew two to the jack, and J. S. Logan and W. S. Drake increased the score to 4. A. A. Razack with a fine draw was unlucky to save only one shot. Scoring 12 shots on the first six ends W. S. Drake's quartette (C. E. Elliott Heywood, J. C. W. Charlton, and J. S. Logan) won by the large margin of 14 shots over A. A. Razack's four.

A fire on the second head gave F. L. Rapley's rink (G. H. Owen, V. Peterick, and G. E. F. Thompson), an early advantage which they never lost, and W. V. Field, champion Junior skip, suffered his second defeat in fifteen games by a 11 shots margin.

I. R. C. Success
Led 19-7 on the fifteenth end F. Sutton's rink rallied surprisingly well against K. M. Omar's four and were beaten by only 22-19. The yachtmen, however, lost surprisingly by 2 shots to their Indian hosts. The Sookmoo Club have only one other success to their credit in their debut year in the Junior league—a 19 shots triumph over the Recreio on their own green.

F. Sutton is the donor of the Sutton Cup which has been presented to foster the competitive spirit among the various offices of the P.W.D.

Passing Of Two Great Tennis Players

Cochet And Vines To Join Tilden Circus

THE Announcement that Henri Cochet, the famous French lawn tennis ace, has decided to turn professional and that Ellsworth Vines, former world champion, is to follow his example shortly has commenced a new chapter in the history of the game. In turning professional they are following the example of "Big Bill" Tilden, Vincent Richards, and Suzanne Lenglen to name the three best known players who have cashed in on their prowess.

IT was Cochet who in 1927, at the age of 25, and a season or two afterward ended Tilden's long dominance of international tennis. Ellsworth Vines, dethroned Cochet last season at Wimbledon, in the Davis Cup, and in the American singles.

Cochet's bid for the American title was frustrated by Vines last year at Forest Hills, but he excused his defeat in straight sets (6-4, 6-4, 6-4) by the fact that he had to conclude his semi-final game against Wilmar Allison on the day of the Final.

His career as an international tennis star dates back to 1926, when he ended Tilden's long reign as American champion. He won Wimbledon title in 1927 and 1929 and has held the French title on four occasions since 1922.

Virtually invincible in play at the Roland Garros stadium in Paris, in six years he has trounced Tilden three times, George Lott twice and John Hennessy. He beat both Bunny Austin and Fred Perry of Great Britain in the 1931 Davis Cup Challenge Round, but lost to Fred Perry in the same match this year. He has been twice beaten by Jack Crawford this year—in the Semi-Final at Wimbledon and in the Final at Antwerp.

With Rene Lacoste and Jean Borotra, both of whom have now retired from international tennis, Henri Cochet formed France's famous "Three Musketeers" who won the Davis Cup for six years. Cochet, who is now 33, is expected to play "Big Bill" Tilden in the

THE decision of Ellsworth Vines to turn professional is not surprising in view of the interest he showed in the reputed $100,000 offer made by the Tilden Circus on the eve of Wimbledon. Last year he carried off every major title in America, won the Wimbledon title on his first visit to England, and secured the "double" by beating Cochet in the American Final.

He was then described as a second Tilden and the fastest player in the world. Then followed his triumph over Cochet in the Davis Cup Challenge Round and his sensational defeat at the hands of Jean Borotra in the vital singles match.

This year he has been eclipsed four times. At Wimbledon he failed completely to reproduce the feat which swept Austin off his feet in the previous year's Final, and was beaten by Jack Crawford, whom he beat in the Semi Final last year. In the Inter Zone Davis Cup Final he was surprisingly beaten by Bunny Austin in straight sets and fainted when playing against Fred Perry with the British player holding match point in a gruelling five set encounter. In the American Championship, in which he was defending his title, he was eliminated in straight sets by Bryan Grant No. 10 ranking player and the smallest competitor in the tournament, in the Fourth Round. TEN CLUBS WITHOUT WINS

ON a day in which Preston North End and Notts County lost their 100 per cent. records Manchester City caused a sensation when they collected a point from Herbert Chapman's wonder team at Highbury on Saturday. The Arsenal have secured only four points in their three home games to date.

The Hibernians, newcomers to the Scottish League this season, forced a draw with their age-old rivals, the Hearts, and Celtic, who had secured only two points in five games, surprised the Rangers at Hampden Park when they shared four goals.

Motherwell and Queen's Park are now the only clubs in the list of 108 with 100 per cent. records. The Arsenal, Aldershot, Tranmere Rovers and Barnsley are on the unbeaten lists, and Derby County, Manchester United, Celtic, St. Mirren, Northampton, Newport, Bristol City, Southport, Darlington, and Rotherham United have yet to record their first win.

The following were the Home Soccer results on Saturday:—

LESSON SERMON

First Church of Christ.
Scientist—Hong Kong.

"Substance" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which was read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 10th.
The Golden Text was: "Thy name, O Lord, endureth for ever; and thy memorial, O Lord, throughout all generations" (Psalms 136:13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also" (Matt. 6:19-21).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Heavenly treasures are laid up where moth and rust doth corrupt, neither thieves break through nor steal: For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also" (Matt. 6:19-21).

National Defense Portfolio.

Rome. It is authoritatively learned that a drastic cabinet shake-up is in prospect for Italy.

Premier Benito Mussolini is expected to assume a new portfolio of national defense, combining the air land and naval offices, with General Italo Balbo, who led the sensational flight of 24 Italian airplanes to Chicago and return, as his chief of staff.

Dino Grandi is slated to resume his former portfolio of foreign minister.

Signor Grandi served as minister of foreign affairs from 1929 until July 22, 1932, when Mussolini took over that portfolio and acted as premier, minister of foreign affairs, minister of interior, minister of corporation and commander-general of the Fascist militia.

Signor Guido Jung is expected to continue as finance minister.

The "Broke", together with H.M.S. Swift engaged and defeated six German destroyers in 1917, and Commander Evans was promoted to Captain for his services in action.

Vice-Admiral Evans was in command of H.M.S. Repulse when the ship brought H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to Hong Kong, en route to Japan for the Garter Mission. From 1929 to 1931, he was Rear-Admiral Commanding the Royal Australian Navy.
